

Business phone bill checklist

10 things to check on your office phone bill before you renew or sign anything new

Grab your last two phone bills and your contract. Tick each item once you've checked it. Anything you can't find on the bill is worth asking your provider about in writing.

- ☐ 1. Line rental: lines paid for vs lines used
Count the lines on the bill, then count the people who actually make calls. Old lines often keep billing after staff leave or move.

- ☐ 2. Numbers you no longer use
Old fax lines, extra direct numbers and 086 or 087 numbers each carry a monthly fee. List them and decide which you still need.

- ☐ 3. What calls to cellphones cost
Find the rate per minute to cellphones and the total spent on them. This is often the largest call line on a business bill.

- ☐ 4. How calls are billed: per second or per minute
Per-minute billing rounds every short call up. Check which one your contract uses.

- ☐ 5. Call set-up and minimum charges
Some contracts add a fee to every call, or a monthly minimum you pay even if you don't use it.

- ☐ 6. Handset rental and switchboard (PABX) costs
Are you still paying rental or maintenance on equipment that has been paid off, or that you no longer use?

- ☐ 7. Contract end date and notice period
Write down when the contract ends and how much notice you must give. Many contracts renew automatically if you miss the window.

- ☐ 8. Yearly price increases
Look for an escalation clause: a fixed percentage your rental goes up by each year.

- ☐ 9. Extras you don't use
Call recording, voicemail-to-email and bundled minutes are often added at signup and forgotten.

- ☐ 10. Is your line still on copper?
Telkom is retiring copper lines area by area. If your office is still on a copper line, plan your move before you're moved.

- 1 Free bill review and network readiness check. We look at your bill and your office network before quoting.
- 2 Keep your number. Your existing numbers can be ported to the new system.
- 3 Handsets set up before delivery. The switchboard runs in the cloud, so handsets arrive ready to plug into your existing network points.
